Blizzard Entertainment, the maker of the World of Warcraft and StarCraft video games, has filed a complaint against Apple
Inc., a statement it said demonstrates the company's "ill conceived, anticompetitive conduct." The lawsuit, filed at the International Trade Commission in Washington, was disclosed in a statement released by Blizzard and cites an ITC complaint from January that Apple violated a US trade ban by importing mobile devices that allowed consumers to "interact with Blizzard's game World of Warcraft." Apple had also allegedly imported devices that allowed users to play those games without paying a monthly subscription fee. "Apple has violated the World of Warcraft trade ban by importing personal computers and other mobile devices that allow consumers to interact with World of Warcraft without paying a monthly subscription fee," said
