The 72 hours of amsterdam In 1923, Rijksmuseum director Daniël ter Lindenstraeten launched the first year of the Amsterdam Group of Museums (AmGev), consisting of Rijksmuseum, Koninklijke Musea voor Schone Kunsten, Het Tropenmuseum, and Musée Natura. The initial six members were drawn from Rijksmuseum, Het Muziekgebouw, Rijksakademie, Nederlands Letterenfonds, Arti et Amicitia, and Arti et Amicitiae. Utilising the provisions of the 1924 Treaty of Rome, the Amsterdam Group of Museums was established and allowed participating museums to create innovative programmes and perform multi-media exhibitions in foreign countries. The Amsterdam Group of Museums also established a publication house and paid for exhibits travelling to other museums. In 1939, the Amsterdam Group of Museums merged with the Royal Museums for Fine Arts in Belgium and the Dutch national museums. Finally, in 1972, in the name of the Noord-Holland province, which had funded the Amsterdam museums since their establishment, the name was changed to the Rijksmuseum and the Groninger Museum to the Groninger Museum.
