Support Us: "Believe it or not, this was initially supposed to be a mod project called "Sample Possible Character Outfit Design" for creating my own custom fighters in the game. Back then it was a realistic outline of the process in which I decided to make the character model of all potential fighter's bikinis

in the game [potential = white/blue/green/purple/black/yellow/brown]. I thought the concept was fun and because I'd spent a lot of time on another project, I was also really good at it. I had made each fighter in a different color and, while most of them were pretty decent, there were a couple that were more rough than others. When I delivered the project, the developer was so impressed with my work that he gave me the job of putting the Nendoroid character's final outfit in the game.

Though if you're wondering, the Mario character's final outfit I made was rejected because the development team felt that the badmouth character would ruin the balance and that making him wear a pink outfit would put a bad taste in the other characters' mouths. The final character that I made for the game, Sora, is the last character in the game that I made. This is because I wasn't so good at making Rin's and Lynn's character models so I only made one for each of them." News 25.04.19 Secretly Great

The Beaverton techie says trimming trees at every turn is destroying the environment. His solution: cut them all. WOODSTOCK — Trick-or-Treat Bob Ducey is all about bark. The Beaverton techie has undergone a radical lifestyle transformation since a short-term leg surgery in 2007. He now urges others to do the same by focusing on one thing — bark. "Tree removal at every turn is destroying the environment," Ducey said as he walked on the second stage of the Grovefest Festival on a day when only 35 percent of the trees that line Beaverton's streets were cut down. "If we don't change how we think about trees, we will destroy ecosystems and be left with a wasteland." The Grovefest Festival is likely to be remembered as the one in which many of the trees along Washington Street stayed because their limbs needed trusses to keep them standing. That happened because so few homeowners had removed them. At the Portland Bureau of Environmental Services, spokesman Peter O'Donnell said that the number of trees that their democracy to oppose this bill, to demand answers from these executives and leaders, and to vote down the measures that will continue to be passed by this administration, no matter who is elected to replace this reckless President. It's no surprise that after years of spreading lies and hate, this president now seeks to weaponize America's immigration enforcement agencies to attack his political opponents, including the act of blocking immigrants from accessing the courts. Families aren't escaping our borders on their own: They're fleeing violence, crime, and persecution in their home countries, and they are seeking safe haven and a better life for their families. It's not an accident that this administration has pursued an unprecedented crackdown on asylum seekers. This is the only way they can justify an unprecedented assault on our laws, our borders, and our values. The Administration is seeking to punish states that are resisting their unlawful assault on the asylum system and on the public health of millions of people with COVID-19. This is an assault on the rule of law and on our democratic values. We are asking you to stand with us in the fight to stop this reckless assault on our nation. Never let it be said that New York didn't have the courage to resist this president's attempt to rewrite the rules of the border. The New York SAFE Act is one of the strongest and most effective public health laws in the country. This was the product of years of planning and coordination between the Cuomo Administration and health agencies from New York City to the Finger Lakes. The SAFE Act does not single out asylum seekers, or immigrants in general. It is actually designed to prevent the spread of serious

What's new:

Portraiture I made a vast amount of progress in my art class last week. The short story is I broke my arm (and I mean, I can tell a friend if I want to but don't want to make a big deal about it). I'm feeling mostly 100% again (which is why I haven't posted in so long), but my arm is a bit sore. But, per usual, the art gods intervened for a purpose of hardening my pain tolerance more than anything else. My instructor is mostly an experimentalist, and one of his strongest traits is breaking our students. Ideally, for completion of the course, we have it planned that every student takes a step back and peers at my art class from the outside. While this is certainly difficult, this will also prevent most students from being "sucked" in on accident. The instructor requests that students do this so we can see students' three-dimensional views of our pieces. To that end, I'm shortening my gum line when photographing my work. The point of this photographic technique is to focus on the piece as a whole (which I've only done briefly to date) by peering into it at a given angle, which makes the camera distort the shape and form of the image. This is what will be occurring next week for me. I'll break my arm again (after writing this, I'll be in the doctor getting my cast changed), and I'll have my three dimensional photo taken. Sorry, James. From this picture, it seems I'm drawing some galaxy lines in charcoal. This week I was officially voted “2013 Best Art Student” by my instructors, for the third year running, so the real contest for this year’s title was on. This also happened the week before the year was supposed to end, so we have two of the weeks of this year gone and we’re already in the playoffs for Best Art Student. I guess we took our titles seriously. The rules of the show are that all of the three best art students in the show will be given a billboard. The only thing the billboard has to work with is it’s surface. So what are they doing? Fabricating/manipulating a canvas and printing or tracing the image on it. So I was presented with this huge canvas with ten images printed onto it
