
Download E Sound Afs We9 Terbaru PORTABLE

E-Sound Afs We9 Terbaru Sound Editor is a creative tool to edit sound files which supports following formats: WAV, MP3, MP2, OGG and WMA. It provides two audio input (mic jack and line in) and 16 different waveform display (spectrum, frequency, amplitude, waveform, RMS, phase, amplitude curves, phase curves, RMS amplitude and phase curves, waveform display, phase display and histogram display). A daemon utility included with the updated firmware will automatically run when the radio first boots and will clear its own cache and download any new sound packs. The same daemon utility can be used to update the firmware at any time. This utility is by no means perfect and may cause problems with the operating system if overused. It will probably need to be created by a third-party, which would like to get their name in the beta testers' good books. The sound files are uncompressed 16-bit, stereo, mono wave files. They are on the AAC format and also smaller and faster to download compared to G711, which is what they are replacing. In fact, there are more sounds in the new sounds app than are on the G711 board. To transfer them to your radio, simply rename the sound pack to g711.aup and place it into the /tmp folder on your hard disk. Some radios with firmware 2.1 may not want to play some of the AAC files, especially if the audio quality is set too high, and you may have to do some work to get them to work. However, most G711 radios should work perfectly. The G711 files are the original wave files. The downloader is able to detect some of the newer file formats and it will try to convert them into a suitable format, such as WAV or AIFF. It can also translate some of the ntoskrnl.dll files into a WAV format. If the downloader fails to do this for a file, it would have been generated at a time when it was a different format. You can do it yourself if you know the original file format. I advise you to make backups of all the files you use, in case the updates go wrong. Please note that some G711 radios may not want to play some of the AAC files, especially if the audio quality is set too high, and you may have to do some work to get them to work. However, most G711 radios should work perfectly.
